

National Museum Survey Acknowledgements

The Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) deeply appreciates the museum administrators and staff from hundreds of institutions across the country who contributed their valuable time and expertise to efforts developing the National Museum Survey. The survey would not have been possible without the museum world's commitment and support.

IMLS would like to extend special thanks to the past and present members of the National Museum Survey's working group of subject matter experts: Ryan Auster, PhD, manager of COVES and Learning Metrics, Museum of Science, Boston; Jen Benoit-Bryan, PhD, research director, SMU DataArts; Richard Doran, marketing and communications manager, American Public Gardens Association; Linda Endersby, PhD, Museum Studies Lecturer, University of Oklahoma; Julia Halperin, journalist, Burns Halperin Report; Joe E. Heimlich, PhD, Professor Emeritus, The Ohio State University; Carys Kunze, research and data specialist, American Alliance of Museums; Sarah Milberg, vice president of external affairs, Association of Zoos and Aquariums; Christina Smiraglia, PhD, Harvard University; John Wetenhall, PhD, director, Association of Academic Museums and Galleries; Bronwyn Bevan, PhD, director of research, Wallace Foundation; John Dichtl, president and CEO, American Association for State and Local History; Cecilia Garibay, PhD, principal, Garibay Group; Sunil Iyengar, director, Office of Research and Analysis, National Endowment for the Arts; Brooke Leonard, interim CEO, American Alliance of Museums; Laura Lott, former president and CEO, American Alliance of Museums; John Marks, director of AASLH Public History Research Lab, American Association for State and Local History; Zannie Voss, director, SMU DataArts; and Elee Wood, director of education and public programs, Huntington Library, Art Museum and Botanical Gardens.
